Usina de energia solar fotovoltaica montenegrina de 50 MW

Montenegro é um pequeno país localizado no sudeste da Europa, com uma população de pouco mais de 600.000 pessoas. Apesar de seu tamanho, o país está se tornando rapidamente um líder na produção de energia renovável, especialmente na área de tecnologia fotovoltaica (PV).

O sol abundante e o terreno montanhoso de Montenegro o tornam um local ideal para a produção de energia solar. O país recebe uma média de 2.500 horas de luz solar por ano, o que o torna um dos lugares mais ensolarados da Europa. Isso permitiu que Montenegro aproveitasse a energia do sol por meio da instalação de painéis fotovoltaicos em todo o país.

Um dos maiores projetos fotovoltaicos em Montenegro é o parque solar Briska Gora, localizado próximo à cidade de Ulcinj. Espera-se que essa instalação de 250 MW produza mais de 400 GWh de eletricidade por ano, o que é suficiente para abastecer 100.000 residências. O projeto é um esforço conjunto entre o governo de Montenegro e investidores privados, que veem o potencial da energia solar para reduzir a dependência do país de combustíveis fósseis e criar um futuro energético mais sustentável.

Além de projetos de grande escala como Briska Gora, Montenegro também está promovendo o uso da tecnologia fotovoltaica em menor escala. O país oferece incentivos para que proprietários de casas e empresas instalem painéis solares em suas propriedades, incluindo isenções fiscais e subsídios para o custo dos equipamentos. Isso levou a um crescimento no número de instalações solares em telhados em Montenegro, aumentando ainda mais a capacidade de energia solar do país.

O compromisso de Montenegro com a energia renovável vai além da energia solar. O país estabeleceu uma meta de gerar 33% de sua eletricidade a partir de fontes renováveis até 2020, com planos de aumentar esse percentual para 36,5% até 2030. Isso inclui não apenas a energia solar, mas também a eólica, a hidrelétrica e a de biomassa.

Pontos-chave

Está sendo considerado um projeto para a construção de uma usina de energia solar (SPP) em Montenegro para a venda de eletricidade a uma rede centralizada sem armazenamento intermediário. A implementação do projeto está planejada para estimular o desenvolvimento da energia solar em Montenegro e a transição para fontes de energia verde renovável sem hidrocarbonetos.

O principal cenário para a implementação do Projeto é o uso de painéis solares fabricados na China, com subsídios da EKO FOND MONTENEGRO, com uma tarifa padrão (cerca de US$ 110 por MWh).
