Exploração de mineração de ouro "Oberzeiring Polymetallic Project" (Projeto polimetálico de Oberzeiring)

A Áustria é um país muito favorável à mineração. O plano do governo austríaco para os recursos minerais serviu até mesmo como modelo para um aviso da UE aos seus estados-membros: "Na UE, a estrutura regulatória deve ser estruturada de forma a incentivar o fornecimento de recursos minerais de fontes europeias".

- 99 reivindicações concedidas perto da vila de Oberzeiring em uma área total de cerca de 35 km<sup>2</sup>
- Na época medieval, Oberzeiring era uma das maiores minas de prata dos Alpes Orientais, com altos teores de ouro, cobre, chumbo e zinco no minério
- A inundação das minas em 1361 fez com que as atividades de mineração fossem interrompidas e as tentativas de desidratação da mina nos últimos séculos não tiveram sucesso devido à tecnologia inadequada disponível naquela época
- Graus registrados de até 114 g/t de ouro e 4.000 g/t de prata
- Cerca de cem minas artesanais são encontradas perto da capital medieval de mineração na área de propriedade do Projeto, que parecem estar associadas a fortes anomalias geofísicas magnéticas e de IP
- Mineralização rica em Au-Ag-Sb-Cu-Zn-Pb-Fe-Barita, também Ge-Ga-In, classificada como matéria-prima crítica na União Europeia
- A amostragem de verificação de setembro de 2019 associada à preparação de um relatório técnico NI 43-101 produziu valores de até 6,4 g/t de ouro e 384 g/t de prata
- O distrito como um todo nunca foi objeto de nenhum trabalho de exploração moderno ou de nenhum programa abrangente de perfuração com diamante.
- Bons contatos com autoridades locais e proprietários de terras, a retomada das atividades de mineração é bem-vinda na região
